JOHNNY DEPP'S VISION MISERY

SUPERSTAR Johnny Depp sure is nice to look at, but if it weren't for corrective lenses, he wouldn't even recognize himself in the mirror!

The 50-year-old actor recently admitted that he's basically blind in his left eye and his right eye is very near-sighted.

This isn't the first time the actor has spoken openly about his vision problems. Two years ago, he admitted that he suffers from a condition known as "stereo blindness," which means he doesn't see things in three dimensions.

It's the same condition that plagued painting great Rembrandt and baseball icon Babe Ruth.

Johnny says he can't even appreciate watching the "Pirates of the Caribbean" flicks in 3-D because Depp suffers the same condition as Rembrandt and Babe Ruth his eyes just don't work that way. To him, everything appears to be two-dimensional.

"My eyes don't see in 3-D," Depp explained. "I have a weird eye."

And he's not alone. Doctors say as many as 20 percent of the population may be unable to see fully in three dimensions.

IN AN INTERVIEW IN THE JULY ISSUE OF

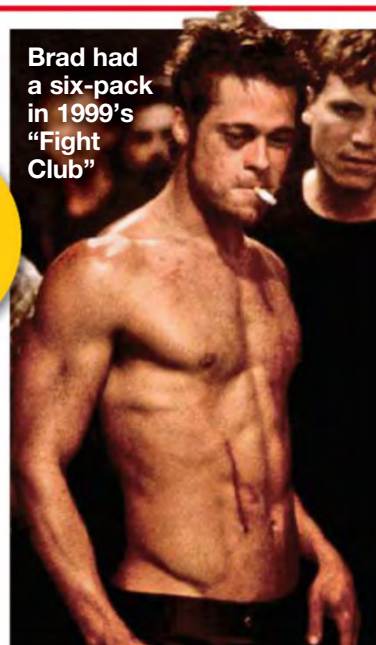

"Rolling Stone Magazine," Johnny admitted to having other vision problems.

In fact, when he has to remove his glasses to shoot a movie scene – like while playing Tonto in the summer blockbuster, "The Lone Ranger" – he can only see a few inches in front of him.

Said Depp: "I've never had proper vision."

Brad had a six-pack in 1999's "Fight Club"

AFTER a horrific 12 months, stressed-out Brad Pitt has packed on a whole lot of extra weight. Sources say the 6-foot-6 actor, who usually weighs around 170 pounds, but he's ballooned to a sloppy 190.

"Brad's well-aware he's carrying extra weight right now," a close pal told The ENQUIRER.

"With everything that's going on, he just hasn't had time to work out.

And let's face it, his personal life has been far from a walk in the park."

WITH CRITICS SLAMMING HIS reported $400 million zombie flick "World War Z," the 49-year-old stud has relentlessly promoted it around the globe. The PR blitz comes just weeks after his fiancée Angelina Jolie revealed she'd undergone a preventative double mastectomy.

"From the moment he gets up, Brad is on the go 24/7," said the source.

"While he's on the road, he's been indulging in his favorite Mexican foods, plus beer and it's starting to show around his jowls and belly."

The "Moneyball" hunk has cut back on his

DON'T FLY AWAY, SUPERMAN!

Henry is dating Gina Carano

SUPERMAN Henry Cavill may have a supersize problem on his hands – his sexy girlfriend isn't happy about sharing the screen hunk with the world.

Henry, 30, began dating mixed martial arts fighter and actress Gina Carano last September, before his career skyrocketed with the release of the blockbuster "Man of Steel." The flick raked in nearly $200 million worldwide in the first week after its release, making the British-born actor the toast of Tinseltown.

"HENRY IS REALLY LAPPING UP THE FAME AND glory," a source told The ENQUIRER. "He knew he would be getting some notice for this, but his life is absolutely crazy right now.

"Gina is used to having Henry all to herself, and now she has to share him with the world. She really fears she's going to be swept away by the rising tide of Henry's career."

Another source says that Gina, who found her own film fame with a butt-kicking role in "Fast & Furious 6" – has long wondered about her future with Henry. The pair began dating barely a month after Henry split from his British fiancée, professional horse-show jumper Ellen Whitaker.

"Gina was hoping Henry would stay grounded with the whirlwind around him, but she fears it's going to his head," the source revealed. "All he's talking about now is making a Superman sequel and winning the coveted starring role in the film version of '50 Shades of Grey.'" It's a far cry from Henry's childhood, when he was ridiculed for being overweight. And while Gina's happy for her boyfriend's success, the 31-year-old beauty is afraid of being left behind.

"Gina asked Henry point-blank: 'Should I be looking for a way out of this relationship?'" the source added. "Henry told her she just needs to be patient.

"He said he spent more than 10 years as an actor when nobody knew who he was, and now he needs to ride this fame train and see where it goes."

As The ENQUIRER has reported, the "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" star also went on a major drinking binge in January and was spotted staggering up to a closed Taco Bell drive-thru at 1 a.m.

"Brad's drinking is not as bad as it might seem, and he'll go days without booze, but his bingeing is really starting to show," said the pal.

"He's often out of breath and has a pasty pallor that not even a spray tan can hide."

"BRAD IS SO READY TO PUT 'World War Z' behind him," added the source. "Appearing with Angelina on several red carpets, and

Courtney Cox (right) is tired of Jennifer Aniston's slights, says a source

Courtney rocked as JEN DITCHES HER

FOR two decades, just about nothing could come between former "Friends" co-stars Jennifer Aniston and Courtney Cox – but now it looks like Jen's fiance Justin Theroux has managed to create a rift!

A source says that Jen skipped Courtney's 49th birthday bash because control-freak Justin wants her to stop hanging out with all her old pals – and Cox is so upset she's ready to kiss the friendship goodbye for good.

ON JUNE 16, Courtney and her closest buddies, including actresses Laura Dern and Isla Fisher, jewelry designer Jennifer Meyer, "Cougar Town" co-stars Busy Philipps and Christa Miller and daughter Coco, gathered at Giorgio Baldi restaurant in Santa Monica. But her best friend of 20 years was noticeably missing.

"Jen's absence was the talk of the party," revealed an insider. "Courtney invited her, but Jen hemmed and hawed and then finally bailed on coming altogether. She used a lame excuse of being tired from too much work."

But Courtney later learned the truth – that Justin, 41, wants his 44-year-old fiancée to "freshen up" her friends list. And the source says he gave her so much grief about going to the party that she finally decided to decline the invitation.

As The ENQUIRER recently reported, Justin is delaying their wedding to focus on his career but Jennifer wants to marry him as soon as possible.

"Her world revolves around Justin," the insider explained. "After they hooked up, she dropped the friends who had stuck by her through her difficult split from Brad Pitt."

Courtney has been understanding of Jen's flaky behavior so far, but she's finally at the end of her rope, says the source – and she's even talking about boycotting Jen and Justin's wedding.

"Courtney is sick of forgiving and forgetting," the insider added. "She's been slighted by Jen one too many times now."

AFTER Tiger Woods' sexy girlfriend called herself his "wife" during an interview, the irate golf champ slapped her with a stinging ultimatum: "Shut up – or else!"

Sources say Olympic skier Lindsey Vonn's loose lips infuriated both Tiger and his ex-wife Elin, and now he's terrified she'll prevent him from seeing their two young children.

"Elin is livid!" a family insider told The ENQUIRER.

"She's told Tiger that she wants full custody of the kids, and she's taking steps to keep them away from Lindsey."

Lindsey, 28, sparked the firestorm when she gave her first interview since she and Tiger announced their romance in March.

The bouncy blonde declared she was "very happy" with Tiger, and added: "We talk golf...but mostly I listen...Lots of people go home and talk to their wife or husband about their job. That's what we do."

When Tiger, 37, heard about Lindsey's comments, he exploded, said the source.

"Tiger knew Elin would be furious," the insider said.

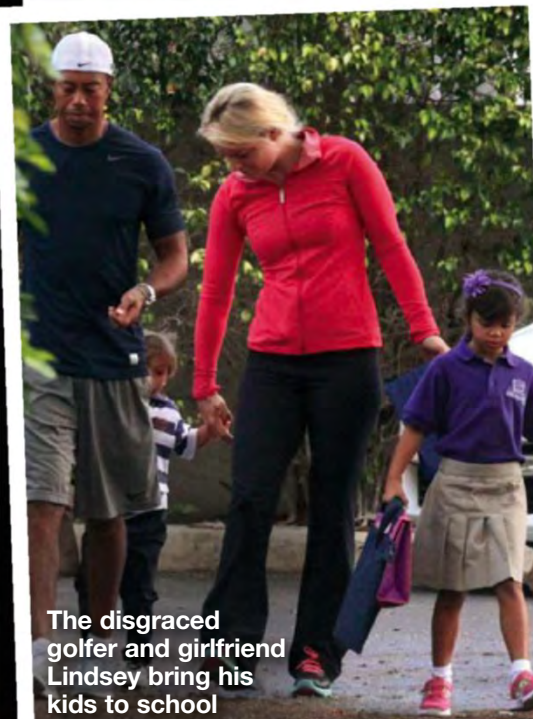

"HE FLEW INTO A RAGE AND TOLD

Lindsey, 'You should learn when to keep your mouth shut! You're going to cost me my kids!'

"Lindsey tried to explain that she meant no harm, but Tiger told her that if she even thinks of herself as his wife, he's done with her."

Tiger, who earned $78 million last year, is also paranoid that Lindsey is trying to get her hooks into his fortune, sources say.

Meanwhile, Swedish-born bombshell Elin, 33, has been angry since Lindsey was photographed taking Tiger's cubs

“Elin thinks Lindsey and Tiger are using the kids for publicity,” said the insider. “And when she heard what Lindsey said about being Tiger’s ‘wife,’ Elin said, ‘That’s the last straw!’”

Now she plans to tackle Tiger in court, added the source.

“THEIR DIVORCE AGREEMENT

specifies that Tiger is not to have the kids around his girlfriends,” explained the insider. “Elin feels he’s violated that agreement, and given her an opening to sue for full custody.”

Tiger and Elin ended their six-year marriage after The ENQUIRER revealed his illicit affair with New York party girl Rachel Uchitel in 2009. In the wake of that revelation, Tiger’s affairs with dozens of bimbos were exposed. He eventually paid Elin a reported

“Elin has never taken Tiger’s romance with Lindsey seriously, figuring he’d get bored with her and it wouldn’t last a year,” said the source. “Now, however, she’s become convinced that Lindsey is trying to replace her as the children’s mother, and she’s certainly not going to let that happen.”

He buys the materials in bulk at trade shows or from China and then sells the items online. He also peddles jewelry-making supplies, including beads, charms, chains, earring wires, hair combs, bracelets, clasps, studs, headbands and pendants.

PARTY monster Blake Shelton's fed-up wife Miranda Lambert has walked out on him to go back on tour – just when they were finally set to spend two whole weeks together!

The two country superstars, who spend more time apart than together, reunited to celebrate Blake's 37th birthday on the June 18 finale of "The Voice." They were also planning to spend some quality time together on their 1,200-acre ranch in Tishomingo, Okla.

But instead of taking "a couple weeks off," as Blake said they planned, sources say Miranda left him at home and headed to Colorado and Montana to perform solo gigs when her group, the Pistol Anies, canceled the June concerts.

"Blake said she didn't have to do it, but she told him she didn't want to let the fans down," revealed a source. "Blake responded: 'What about me?' He was furious, but Miranda had already made up her mind."

Then, the source says, fiery Miranda, 29, headed out on tour despite Blake's wishes.

"Miranda is sick of Blake's boozing and the reports of his womanizing," said the insider. Blake boasted about getting stinking drunk after his singer Danielle Bradbery won Season 4 of "The Voice," declaring "we are going to blow it out. That means drinking our face off."

While he admits boozing, Blake denies cheating, but the source says: "Miranda has her doubts."

As The ENQUIRER has reported, Miranda confronted singer Cady Groves, 23, whom she suspected of cheating with her hubby. Miranda also reportedly warned Blake to stay away from last season's "Voice" winner Cassadee Pope, a 23-year-old Florida native whom he mentored. And she's said to Adding to their marital stress are the demands of their careers. Between their separate concert tours and his gig as "Voice" coach, they're barely together at all. "It's put a terrible strain on them and they're at the breaking point," said an insider close to the pair.

WHEN THEY DO HAVE A CHANCE TO BE TOGETHER, it seems as though something always comes up. "Miranda took a break from her concert tour in late May, but instead of joining Blake in L.A., she went back to Oklahoma...to care for her dogs," said a source. "Blake told her, 'Sometimes, I think you care more about those damn dogs than you do about me!'"

Meanwhile, a source says Blake wants Miranda to cut down on her touring schedule to spend more time with him in L.A. while he's doing "The Voice" – but that idea "went over like a lead balloon."

"Miranda sees Blake wanting her to make all the concessions, and she isn't having it," continued the source. "It's like never the twain shall meet with them. And they get too angry with each other to work out any reasonable compromises – they both dig their heels in."

Still, "Miranda insists she will never give up on their marriage."

And they said, ‘We’ll do better than that!’” So that afternoon, the Fab Four burst into the deli and belted out “Happy Birthday” to the stunned woman behind the counter. “It was fabulous,” said the source. “When they finished, everyone applauded, except the woman they’d sung to – who burst out laughing and told the stunned funnyfellas: ‘Sorry, guys, Sheila left early today...it’s her birthday!’” MIKE and MAURICE had good faces!

James Gandolfini DIDN'T HAVE TO DIE!

BELOVED actor James Gandolfini was warned he was a heart attack waiting to happen just before his fateful trip to Italy, and then he checked into a hotel that wasn't equipped with a defibrillator that could have saved his life!

In an exhaustive investigation into “The Sopranos” star's tragic final hours, The ENQUIRER has also learned the 51-year-old actor complained of feeling ill shortly before suffering his fatal heart attack.

Sources say Gandolfini lay on the bathroom floor of his hotel suite for more than 30 minutes before medical help arrived. But by then, it was too late. The man the world knew as TV's greatest mob boss, Tony Soprano, was dead.

Medical sources say Gandolfini's biggest mistake was booking a $671-a-night suite at Rome's posh Boscolo Exedra hotel, which didn't have a $1,200 defibrillator that could have jump-started his heart.

But insiders say the 6-foot-1 actor – who's publicly admitted to battling booze and drug addictions – had “Only hours before James jetted off to Rome, he struggled into a chiropractor’s office,” a close friend of the actor told The ENQUIRER.

“His weight had soared, he was drinking again, and his back was under stress. He was in terrible pain and dreaded the long flight overseas. The chiropractor told James point-blank that he had to stop drinking and go on a serious diet – or else he’d have a heart attack. James didn’t listen – and that’s exactly what happened!”

The ENQUIRER has retraced Gandolfini’s steps in Rome, where he planned to spend three days sightseeing with his son from his first marriage, 13-year-old Michael, before heading to the Taormina Film Festival in Sicily.

His sister Leta Gandolfini, 65, joined them after a work trip in France. But second wife Deborah Lin and their 8-month-old daughter Liliana remained in Los Angeles.

ON THEIR FIRST NIGHT IN THE ETERNAL CITY, June 18, Gandolfini and his son dined at the Sabatini restaurant near the Tiber River. The three-time Emmy winner gorged on a large platter of pasta and tomato sauce, and drank Campari and soda and red wine.

They returned to their hotel, where Gandolfini spent over an hour in the bar. He chatted with patrons and staff members, and drank several glasses of red wine before heading to his room, said a hotel source.

The next day, Gandolfini and his son did some sightseeing in sweltering 100-degree heat. At around 7 p.m., they sat down at their hotel’s outdoor restaurant Tazio. Although Gandolfini didn’t realize it, the meal was destined to be his last supper – and it was massive!

The actor consumed at least eight alcoholic drinks – four shots of rum, two beers and two pina colodas, sources say.

He also ate two large orders of fatty pate foie gras, or duck liver, on toast, plus two orders of fried King prawns and squid in a greasy mayonnaise-chili sauce, along with a basket of rolls smeared with a soft cheese and cherries.

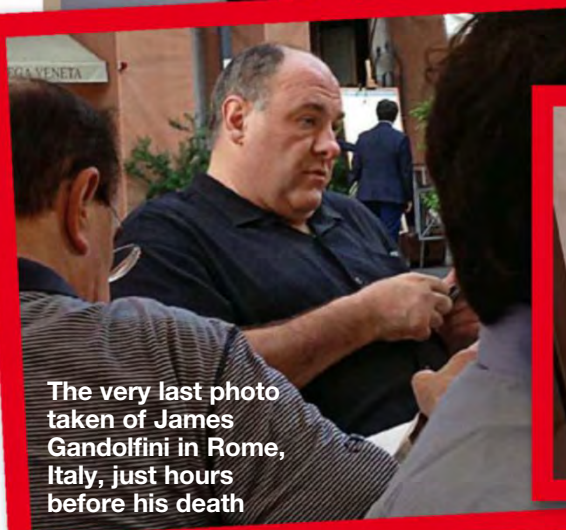

“I was shocked. He ate like four men!” a source at the restaurant told The ENQUIRER.

“He looked tired, but he was laughing with other guests and having a great time.”

Gandolfini’s “killer meal” brought his calorie count to 5,000 for the day, according to experts, and The ENQUIRER has learned that shortly after returning to his hotel room with his son, he felt ill.

“James complained to Michael of not feeling well and excused himself to go to the bathroom,” family friend Robert Sottolano – who, along with his wife, lives near the actor’s sister Leta in Westwood, N.J. – told The ENQUIRER.

“When he didn’t come out, Michael tried to check on him. James was having the heart attack, but Michael never realized it.”

Gandolfini was in the bathroom for 30 minutes before Michael began pounding on the door, Sottolano said. When his father didn’t respond, Michael bolted out of the room and went down to the lobby, shouting for help, according to concierge Pasquale Benedicchio. “The boy was distraught – in a complete panic,” Benedicchio told The ENQUIRER.

“Security personnel rushed upstairs and used a screwdriver to open the lock on the bathroom door. They found Gandolfini on the floor in front of the toilet, unconscious, and immediately called the ambulance.”

The ambulance arrived within minutes and it took six hotel security men to get the hefty Gandolfini onto a gurney and down the elevator. But The ENQUIRER has learned that it was already too late. Sadly, “The Sopranos” star was already dead.

“There was no hope to revive him,” Livio De Angelis, director of ambulance services in Rome, who reviewed the ambulance drivers’ report, told The ENQUIRER.

“We got a Code Red call, which is the most urgent, at about 10 p.m. We were told that the patient was not breathing and not conscious.

“Ambulance No. 686 from Via Treviso was nearest and arrived at the hotel in eight minutes at the most. We even sent a second ambulance that arrived two minutes after the first one.

“When the ambulance crew arrived, Gandolfini’s son was not to be seen, but his sister was standing outside the room. She shouted, ‘Come in! Come in!’”

“Hotel personnel had been doing CPR, and our drivers hooked up a defibrillator immediately. But the patient had already flat-lined. He had no systolic pressure, and the defibrillator could not be used effectively.

“The crew began to use an ambu-bag to force oxygen into his lungs and continued heart massage all the way to the hospital. But he was long dead. There was no heart activity.”

INVESTIGATION

James Gandolfini DIDN'T HAVE TO DIE!

cy room while doctors tried to save him, he added.

"It was quite obvious that they were distraught," said De Angelis.

"We had no idea that he was a famous man – only an American tourist who was a very large man, and apparently had suffered a fatal heart attack."

Gandolfini was pronounced dead at Policlinico Umberto hospital by Dr. Claudio Modini at 11:00 p.m.

But The ENQUIRER has learned that if his hotel had been equipped with a defibrillator, which is standard equipment for many luxury hotels in Rome, Gandolfini may have been saved.

"HE ABSOLUTELY MAY HAVE survived if hotel personnel had used an AED (Automated External Defibrillator) when they found him," Dr. Matthew Budoff, who has not treated Gandolfini but is an associate professor of medicine at the David Geffen School of Medicine UCLA and a renowned cardiologist, told The ENQUIRER.

"For each minute that passes following a heart attack, the survival rates drop by 10 percent. So if five minutes pass without assistance by the AED, his survival rate is 50 percent. If 10 minutes go by, the risk of dying is 100 percent. There is no question that had they used an AED when they first found him, his chances of survival would have been greatly improved."

The initial autopsy report confirmed that Gandolfini had suffered a fatal heart attack.

In a final insult to the actor's dignity, The ENQUIRER has learned that his luxury Soarway Diver Seal watch, which he designed with German watchmaker Michael Kobold, had been stolen.

The actor was wearing the pricey timepiece when he fell ill, but it disappeared somewhere between the hotel bathroom and the morgue, sources say.

"Police in Rome are investigating the case," a source told The ENQUIRER.

'Sopranos' star WAS READY TO DUMP WIFE

Gandolfini planned to divorce & begged ex to reunite

JAMES GANDOLFINI's second marriage was on the rocks, and in the last weeks of his life he begged his former fiancée to reunite with him!

But "The Sopranos" star's ex-lover, Lora Somoza, wasn't interested, a source says. The beloved actor went into a tragic downward spiral that ended with his death.

"James never fell out of love with Lora, and he was desperate to reconcile with her," revealed a close source.

"Two weeks before he died, he reached out to her in a long and emotional phone call. He wanted to get back with her and begged her to see him in Los Angeles.

"But Lora made it clear to James that she's involved in a steady relationship, and it crushed him. He was becoming more and more despondent, drinking and packing on the pounds." The Emmy-winning actor had only been going through the motions in his four-year marriage to former model Deborah Lin, who gave birth to their daughter Liliana in October, added the source.

"JAMES LOVED LILIANA AND HAD EVERY INTENTION OF BEING a good dad," said the source. "But the spark had gone out of his marriage to Deborah. I believe he was going to start shopping for a divorce lawyer, and he wanted the good times he had with Lora again." Gandolfini met Lora in 2000 while she was working as an assistant to the director on the set of his movie "The Mexican." He was married to his first wife Marcy at the time, and after they divorced in 2002, the actor and Lora got engaged in 2003.

But they split in 2005 when Gandolfini, who'd been in and out of rehab for booze and drugs, fell off the wagon.

"Jim and I talked only two weeks ago," Lora – who now hosts the weekly sex therapy webcast "Between the Sheets with Lora Somoza" – confirmed to The ENQUIRER. "I will always love him, but I'm very happy with my boyfriend. Still, I am devastated by JAMES GANDOLFINI because blevine@nationalenquirer.com

THINGS are getting hairy between Sherri Shepherd and Wendy Williams!

The two talk-show divas have made nice on camera, but insiders say behind the scenes they're dissing each other's wig collections.

"Sherri pretends she doesn't care about Wendy's wigs," a source told The ENQUIRER.

"But she was overheard saying that her styles are more natural and practical, while Wendy's line seems to be geared toward young girls and drag queens. Sherri would never say it to Wendy's face of course, but it was a clear jab."

Shepherd, 46, often mentions her 12-piece collection for LuxHair while co-hosting "The View." It's already available on wigs.com, QVC and other Internet sites.

Meanwhile, 48-year-old Williams' line, Wendy Williams Hair World, will launch this summer. The former radio DJ – who's been diagnosed with a thyroid condition that can cause hair loss – is known for her fabulous hairpieces and extensions.

DESPITE THEIR BUSINESS RIVALRY, WILLIAMS allowed Shepherd to plug her wig line during a June 17 appearance on "The Wendy Williams Show."

"Wendy heard about Sherri's nasty comment afterward, but she wasn't that concerned," added the source. "She was actually more upset that she didn't know about it sooner because she would have loved to confront Sherri on the air."

"Besides, Wendy's not worried about her wig line flopping because she considers herself an expert on all things hair-related. She says the proof is in the pudding – and her hair is always impeccably styled for TV. But that's not true for Sherri!"

SHE's got the royal hairdo down pat – now Naomi Watts is proving she's also got Princess Diana's huge heart.

The gorgeous actress, who's playing the late Princess of Wales in a highly anticipated biopic, is buying clothing she wore in the film and plans to auction it off and donate the proceeds to Diana's favorite charities.

NAOMI, 44, HAS HIGH HOPES the royal role will win her a Best Actress Oscar in February. Donating money from the wardrobe sale is her way of giving back – and giving thanks – for landing the coveted job.

"Naomi's extremely focused on seeing this movie to the end," revealed a source. "She's going to do all she can to get an Oscar nod, and if she does, she thinks the clothes she wore during the movie could be worth almost as much as those worn by Diana herself.

"That's why she's bought almost half of her movie wardrobe. She wants to sell it to help some of Diana's favorite causes, such as AIDS and land mines."

Among the stunning pieces Naomi purchased from the wardrobe department were replicas of a one-shoulder cobalt-blue Versace dress Diana wore in 1996 and a black cocktail dress by Christina Stambolian that she donned the night Prince Charles first publicly announced his infidelity in 1994.

The film, "Diana," which is scheduled for an Aug. 29 release, covers the last two years of the beloved royal's life. Diana, along with her boyfriend Dodi Al Fayed, was tragically killed in a car accident in Paris on Aug. 31, 1997.

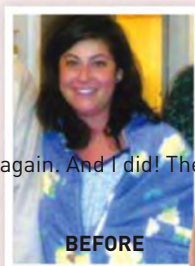

"Naomi's dream is to win an Oscar," added the insider, "but she also wants this to be a charity bonanza in Diana's memory."

Charlie reportedly offered Mila $1 million per episode to join "Anger Management"

SKIRT-CHASER CHARLIE MAKES PLAY FOR MILA

Ashton is enraged

Ashton warns bitter rival TO BACK OFF

ASHTON KUTCHER and Charlie Sheen are squaring off over Mila Kunis!

Charlie enraged his replacement on "Two and a Half Men" by making Ashton's girlfriend an offer she could hardly refuse to join the cast of his sitcom "Anger Management," says a source.

Charlie, who is an executive producer as well as star of the FX series, reached out to Mila after dumping co-star Selma Blair in a fit of rage.

"Charlie reportedly offered Mila a million dollars an episode to come onboard," revealed an insider. "The problem is that Mila is in a serious relationship with Ashton, who is Charlie's archrival. There's been bad blood between them since Ashton replaced Charlie on 'Two and a Half Men.' People are wondering if Charlie is wooing Mila to join his show just to get Ashton's goat."

Ashton, 35, wants Charlie to back off, said the source. "He doesn't want Mila to subject herself to his womanizing ways and crazy antics."

THE 47-YEAR-OLD STAR'S latest outrage was firing Blair via a vulgar-worded text message after she complained to execs that he was always late and had a poor work ethic. What's more, he told producers either she goes, or he walks.

"Charlie was furious Selma complained about him after he approved her as a co-star on the show," said the insider. "He feels she betrayed him."

KIRSTIE ALLEY wants to reunite her "Cheers" co-stars on her new TV Land series – except for Shelley Long!

A source says the two actresses feuded after Kirstie replaced Shelley on the long-running NBC sitcom in 1987, and Kirstie refuses to appear alongside her former rival.

"Kirstie was furious when she starred on 'Cheers' and producers decided to bring Shelley back as a guest star," a source told The ENQUIRER.

What really sparked Kirstie's ire, continues the source, was how fans kept writing in about how they missed the sexual tension between Ted Danson's character Sam Malone and Shelley's Diane Chambers after Kirstie came aboard playing bar manager Rebecca Howe.

"KIRSTIE HATED PLAYING SECOND fiddle to Shelley and never forgave her for treating her rudely when she returned to the set," added the source.

Former "Cheers" favorite Rhea Perlman will be a regular on "Kirstie," and George Wendt – who played Norm on "Cheers" – has signed on for a guest-starring gig. Kirstie also hopes to land Woody Harrelson and Ted Danson, said the source.

"But Kirstie was absolutely stunned when TV Land suggested Shelley be on the series," said the source. "Along with starring on the sitcom, Kirstie is also one of its executive producers, and she said there's no way in hell that she'd bring Shelley onto HER show."

During her six-year stint on "Cheers," Kirstie nabbed an Emmy and a Golden Globe. She's Kirstie with former co-star Shelley Long worked steadily since TV's beloved Boston bar closed its doors in 1993, and was the runner-up on Season 12 of "Dancing with the Stars."

In her new series, the 62-year-old actress plays a Broadway star who reconnects with the biological son she gave up for adoption.

Perlman will portray her trusted friend and personal assistant, while "Seinfeld" alum Michael Richards will play her eccentric driver and Jason Alexander – also of "Seinfeld" fame – will guest star as her agent.

Although Kirstie is thrilled at reuniting with her "Cheers" chums, she just doesn't think Shelley, 63, would fit in, said the source.

"Kirstie wasn't particularly fond of Shelley when she came back to the show that made her a star," noted the source. "So she's not even entertaining the idea of bringing Shelley on to her new show. It's Kirstie's show and Kirstie's rules – and that means no Shelley Long."

AT the rate things are going, "Jersey Shore" starlet Snooki may never get married!

The pint-size dynamo, her fiancé, Jionni LaValle, and their 10-month-old son, Lorenzo, have been living in the basement of her future in-laws' home in Hanover, N.J., while waiting for construction on their new house to be finished.

BUT THE TIGHT QUARTERS ARE starting to get to Snooki, 25, says a source, and she and Jionni, 26, have been at each other's throats.

"The living arrangements have been hard on them," said a source. "Snooki is hoping that once they move into their own place, they can get back to the business of being happy again."

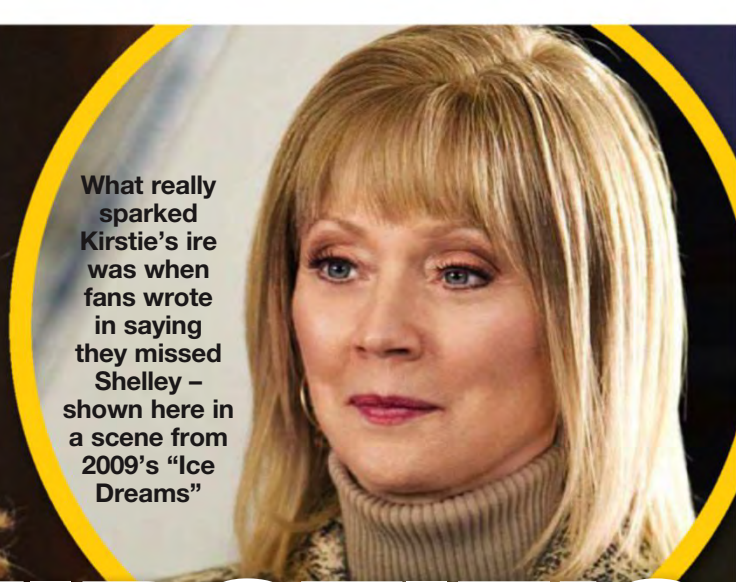

Snooki hopes once they move out, they can get back to being happy again

Sources say Kirstie was furious when producers brought Shelley back as a guest star on "Cheers"

What really sparked Kirstie's ire was when fans wrote in saying they missed Shelley – shown here in a scene from 2009's "Ice Dreams"

The last thing Snooki wants is to break up with Jionni and wind up in a custody battle over little Lorenzo, says a source

The couple bought a parcel of land 10 minutes from where Jionni's parents, Janis and Joe LaValle, live, but they agreed to put off their wedding until the house is built.

Plans for the Tuscan Villa-style home include five bedrooms, six bathrooms, a big playroom, huge closets for Snooki's ever-growing shoe collection, a pool, a patio and even a man cave for Jionni.

But insiders say construction is taking longer than anticipated, and that's not sitting well with Snooki, whose real name is Nicole Polizzi.

“SNOOKI THINKS JIONNI IS STALLING because he loves being catered to by his mama, who cooks meals for the couple, baby-sits and even helps with their laundry,” said the source.

If they don't finish the new house soon, there could be trouble, but “the last thing she wants to do is break up their little family and wind up in a custody fight over their son.”

ALL hell has broken loose in Paula Deen's kitchen since The ENQUIRER revealed that she admitted to using the N-word in a recent court deposition.

Paula is taking heat from the backlash of the shocking racial scandal, and now diabetic Deen is bingeing on fattening foods as her life spins wildly out of control. Meanwhile, she's been fired from the Food Network, her own sons, Bobby and Jamie, have turned their backs on her, and she's fighting with her brother-turned-business partner for dragging her into this mess in the first place.

IT'S WORSE THAN ANYONE THOUGHT!

THE ENQUIRER WAS THE first to reveal the bombshell scandal, which stemmed from a discrimination and sexual harassment lawsuit filed by Lisa Jackson, a former general manager at Uncle Bubba's Oyster House, which Paula co-owns with her brother Earl "Bubba" Hiers in Savannah, Ga.

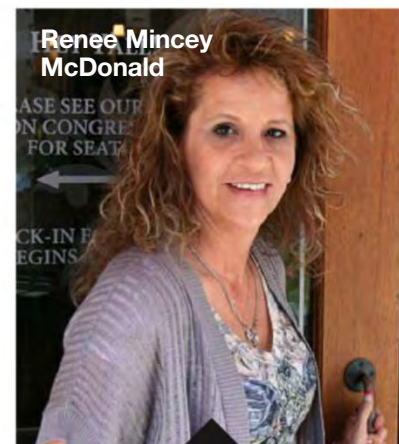

Now we have the firsthand account from ANOTHER former employee, Renee Mincey McDonald, who claims that the black staff members at Paula's restaurant, the famous Lady & Sons, were "treated like animals!"

ENQUIRER readers were first introduced to Mincey McDonald in 2011, when she blew the lid off the unsanitary conditions and practices she observed at the restaurant while employed there as a waitress between 1998 and 2003. She passed a polygraph test about her allegations.

Mincey McDonald recently spoke with The ENQUIRER again, and she confirmed that Paula DID use the N-word as recently as 10 years ago, and would also "refer to homosexuals as f**."

Renee Mincey McDonald

Her former restaurant worker TELLS ALL!

"N was Paula's favorite word – she used it all the time! I've heard Paula specifically say she 'did not want any n working in front of the house as hostesses, waiters or bussers,'" Mincey McDonald recalled. "She only wanted them working in the back of the restaurant where the patrons couldn't see them."

"After finishing the dinner rush on some holidays, such as Easter or Mother's Day, Paula would lock the restaurant doors and hide money all over the dining room. Then she would bring the all-black kitchen staff in and

The Accuser

Lisa Jackson brought the hugely damaging lawsuit against Paula

“It was Bubba’s outlandish behavior that really pushed Lisa Jackson over the edge encourage them to run around and turn the dining room upside down, scrounging for money.

“Paula would just sit back and laugh hysterically, as if her overworked, underpaid employees foraging for money was some sort of circus sideshow. It was completely demoralizing for those people barely making minimum wage, yet Paula howled as she watched.”

A Deen representative denied that Deen used derogatory terms to refer to black and homosexual employees and that she did not want black employees in the front of the house or that she forced employees to forage for money.

But the damning allegations continue to roll in. An attorney for the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition, a civil rights group founded by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, interviewed current and former restaurant employees after the scandal broke. Multiple employees claimed that Paula and Bubba routinely discriminated against black workers, and a Deen family member reportedly even referred to one black cook as “my little monkey!”

BUT IT’S NOW ALL COMING home to roost for the Southern kitchen queen. A source close to her family said the racial scandal has been “the most devastating crisis to ever strike Paula’s career.”

“Now, her worst nightmare has occurred – it’s tearing apart her family, too,” the source continued. “Even her sons are running for cover. They see her career sinking like the Titanic, and they don’t want her dragging them down with her.”

Bobby’s TV show, “Not My Mama’s Meals,” airs weekly on the Cooking Channel, which is owned by Scripps Networks Interactive – the same media giant that co-owns the Food Network. The show has not been canceled, and Bobby, 43, wants to keep it that way. “Bobby and his brother Jamie are trying to be supportive of their mother because they know the legal battle is taking its toll on her,” the source explained. “But at the same time, they’re furious over the racially laced comments she made in the deposition because it’s jeopardized their reputations and livelihoods.”

PAULA IS SO STRESSED OUT BY HER CURRENT situation that she has turned to fatty foods for comfort, say sources. It’s a dangerous turn of events for the Type 2 diabetic, who dropped 40 pounds since adopting a healthier lifestyle after the diagnosis.

“Paula is an emotional eater with very little self-control when it comes to drowning her sorrows with fattening comfort foods – and having her racist remarks laid bare has triggered a round of unparalleled eating binges,” the source revealed.

“She’s already packed on a few pounds since the scandal broke, and if she continues in this direction she’ll plump up larger than she was before.”

The 66-year-old is also on the verge of an emotional meltdown, say sources. On June 21, she suddenly backed out of an interview with Matt Lauer on the “Today” show, blaming “exhaustion.” But The ENQUIRER has learned it was because she was paralyzed with anxiety in her room at New York’s Gansevoort hotel.

According to sources, it took hours for Paula’s handlers to calm her down enough to tape her now infamous YouTube apology video. While Paula hoped the video would work in her favor, it’s instead being cited as the linchpin that triggered

Southern cooking queen’s SHOCKING FALL FROM GRACE

PAULA DEEN’s career has gone up in flames – and it was The ENQUIRER that first broke the story about the famed TV chef using racial slurs!

For the past 16 months, our top notch reporters, editors and researchers have been digging into Paula’s past, traveling to her hometown of Savannah, Ga., where we’ve interviewed dozens of people close to the butter-loving Southern belle – and boy have they had stories to tell!

In mid-June, The ENQUIRER was the first media organization to uncover the racist confessions Paula was forced to reveal during a

May 17 legal deposition. And we noted that the blockbuster testimony in the ongoing discrimination lawsuit had been videotaped.

Our shocking exclusive left the rest of the world’s media playing catch-up – and it wasn’t the first time!

Here’s a look back at the smorgasbord of scandals The ENQUIRER has served up.

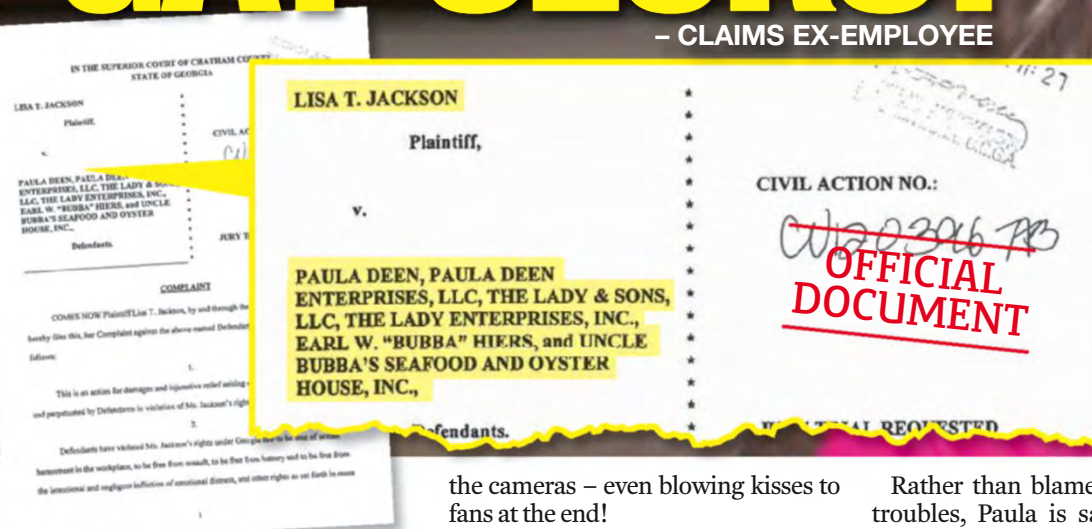

June 17, 2013

A few weeks ago, we revealed that Paula’s legal troubles due to the Lisa Jackson lawsuit were boiling over into her marriage to tugboat captain Michael Groover, and

ENQUIRER EXCLUSIVE

Paula Deen USED VILE GAY SLURS!

— CLAIMS EX-EMPLOYEE

Paula's Apology

The comfort-food queen had to be calmed down before she could make her notorious YouTube video, says a source her dismissal from the Food Network.

Ironically, Paula's emotional plea for forgiveness was a far cry from the demeanor she exhibited in a three-hour video taken during her May 17 deposition. The ENQUIRER is the only media outlet that has viewed the deposition video and can report that the perfectly primed Paula plays to the cameras — even blowing kisses to fans at the end!

If people are slow to believe the sincerity of Paula's apology, it shouldn't come as a surprise. Last year during an appearance on NBC's "Who Do You Think You Are?," Paula appeared "shocked" after learning that her great-great-great grandfather had owned 37 slaves — this after years of claiming that her family was "never involved in slavery in any way."

Rather than blame herself for her troubles, Paula is said to hold her brother Bubba responsible. And the two recently had a blowout fight that's left Paula thinking about severing ties with him completely.

IN A DEPOSITION GIVEN IN THE CASE earlier this year, Bubba — who was the original focus of Jackson's lawsuit — admitted to using racial slurs, watching pornography at work, stealing money from Paula and going to rehab for cocaine and alcohol abuse.

"In Paula's mind, the only thing she did wrong was use offensive language in front of people she shouldn't have," noted the source. "It was Bubba's outlandish behavior that really pushed Lisa Jackson over the edge and prompted her to file the lawsuit."

"Now, Paula is spitting mad, and many think it's only because she got caught."

sources speculated that they were headed for divorce.

Oct. 8, 2012

We were the first to report that Paula has a potty mouth and that she launched into an R-rated tirade in a two-minute promo video. She took it even further by simulating a sex act on a chocolate éclair.

March 19, 2012

The ENQUIRER exclusively revealed that the outspoken Southern cook had been branded a racist in Jackson's lawsuit.

June 20, 2011

In an exclusive interview, former Lady & Sons waitress Renee Mincey McDonald told us that Paula ate from the trash and customers' plates, stuck her dirty fingers into customers' meals and once lost a fake fingernail in the holiday stuffing but served it anyway!

May 23, 2011

The ENQUIRER scooped everyone on the tragic story of how Paula's beloved nephew Jay Hiers took his own life after catching his wife in bed with another man.

May 9, 2011

We broke the story of Paula's battle with Type 2 diabetes, revealing that she'd hidden her medical condition while continuing to tout high-fat recipes that experts say can lead to diabetes...even though she was under doctors' orders to steer clear of those foods!

March 28, 2011

We unearthed the shocking news that Paula's brother-in-law Henry "Hank" Bowers Groover — a Catholic priest — was arrested for sexual battery after he fondled the crotch of an undercover police officer in Savannah, Ga., in 2003. In a follow-up story, we reported that Groover was put on indefinite leave from the Church.

KELLY CLARKSON

THEN

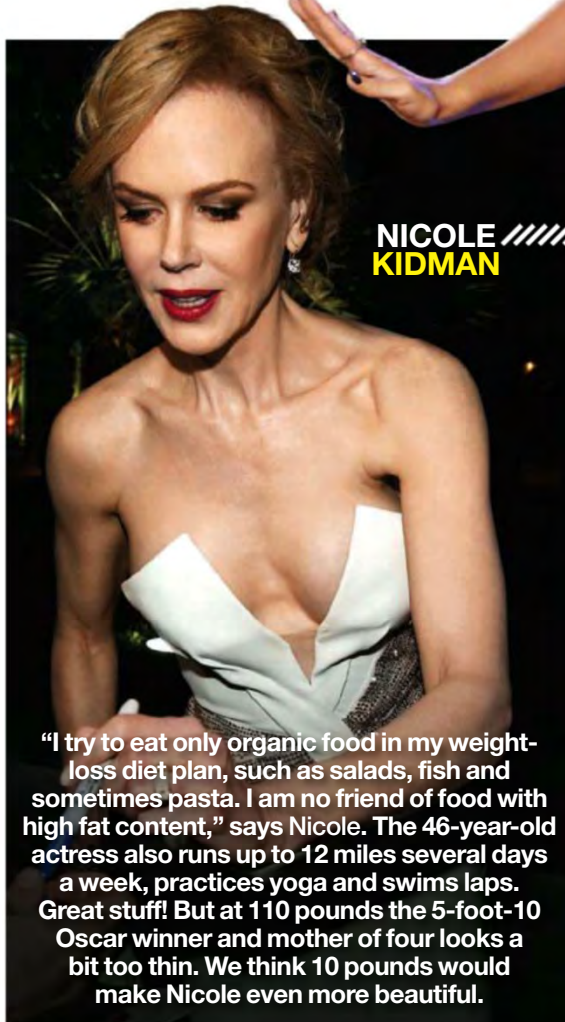

"Starting my 5 day ('Juice Nashville') cleanse and I have to say so far it's super delicious," Kelly tweeted on June 5. That's five 16-ounce bottles of juice, one bottle of almond milk and a ton of water each day for five days. The 5-foot-4 "American Idol" winner (here on a hiking tour in Hawaii) is trying to shed 30 pounds. Kelly, 31, loves anything chocolate. At her heaviest, the singer was 170 pounds, 48 more than she was on the day she won "Idol" 10 years ago.

Best & Worst CELEBRITY

Who's gained & lost the most!

HOLLYWOOD celebs are always trying – and many times struggling – to stay body beautiful for those camera shots that keep them in the public eye. Some of them are really good at it, mixing a sensible diet and exercise to stay fit. Others give up the fight and go racing off to the refrigerator. Still others take their slim-down regimens to extremes, risking deadly health problems by starving themselves, using pills, trying weird diet devices or overexercising. The results can be pretty bad. The ENQUIRER captured some recent photos of top celebs and is dishing out the skinny on their diet secrets.

NICOLE KIDMAN

"I try to eat only organic food in my weight-loss diet plan, such as salads, fish and sometimes pasta. I am no friend of food with high fat content," says Nicole. The 46-year-old actress also runs up to 12 miles several days a week, practices yoga and swims laps. Great stuff! But at 110 pounds the 5-foot-10 Oscar winner and mother of four looks a bit too thin. We think 10 pounds would make Nicole even more beautiful.

NOW

THEN

Christina, 32, has gotten her act together. Xtina looked super-hot performing on the June 18 season finale of "The Voice." The pop diva, who's 5-foot-2, had ballooned up to 140 pounds chowing down on junk food and drinking too much, say sources. But the singer will be sitting pretty when she returns as a "Voice" judge next season. Christina dropped 20-plus pounds with a 1,600-calories-a-day diet along with weight training and yoga.

Denise looked extra thin when she visited New York on June 11 to discuss her ABC Family series "Twisted" on "Good Morning America." The 42-year-old mother of three combined weight-lifting and kick-boxing routines to lose pregnancy weight – and get her 124-pound bikini body back. But Charlie Sheen's 5-foot-6 ex could be overdoing it with workouts. She appears to be at least 15 pounds lighter.

DENISE RICHARDS

GABOUREY SIDIBE

Gabourey (shown here on the red carpet at an HBO premiere event in New York) does not reflect the "Hollywood ideal" image. Of course, that didn't stop the talented 30-year-old from nabbing an Oscar nomination for her performance in the sleeper hit movie "Precious." Gabourey, who is 5-foot-5, admits she's always had a weight problem. She loves food, lots of it. And that's one reason why her weight fluctuates between 350 and 400 pounds.

RICHIE

"Fashion Star" mentor Nicole looked stick-thin in a backless Marc Jacobs dress at the CFDA fashion awards show in New York on June 3. The 31-year-old "Simple Life" star's weight reportedly once plummeted to 83 pounds, making her dangerously close to becoming anorexic and forcing her to seek treatment. The diminutive mother of two now weighs a healthier 105 pounds but should still pack a few more pounds on her 5-foot-1 frame. She now eats organic, even growing her own veggies for salads and stir-fry dishes.

WILSON

Funnygal sensation Rebel, 27, lost 33 pounds as a Jenny Craig spokeswoman in 2011. But she had to stop dieting because her contract as "Fat Amy" in last year's flick "Pitch Perfect" stated she had to stay hefty. Here the 5-foot-2 actress hikes off some more weight in L.A.'s Griffith Park on May 20. "I love ice cream," admits Rebel, who'd like to drop another 20 pounds. She also craves cupcakes and adds that she could "eat my weight in macaroons."

Who's gained & lost the most!

PAQUIN

There's a lot less of "True Blood" star Anna for those vampires to feast upon. The 5-foot-5 actress was looking way too slender at the HBO show's Season 6 premiere in Hollywood on June 11. After giving birth to twins last year, Anna, 30, got her figure back with heavy workouts and may be overdoing it. She jogs, boxes and lifts weights to maintain her 120-pound physique. And she eats what she wants but doesn't overdo it. She says the best way to lose weight is to do it slowly – but it's time to stop.

NOW

////// WYNONNA JUDD

Country star Wynonna was the first celeb kicked off this season's "Dancing with the Stars." It's a shame. Wynonna, 49, hoped to drop extra pounds she put on with stressful overeating as hubby "Cactus" Moser recovered from life-threatening injuries he suffered in a motorcycle accident. In the past, Wynonna's tried diet pills, low-calorie meals, overeaters' rehab and even a device that supposedly zaps food cravings. She lost 60 pounds several years back but was nearing her all-time high of 260 pounds. Still, the brief dancing stint looks like it helped the 5-foot-5 star drop about 10 pounds.

Taylor, 23, does overeat (she loves cheeseburgers) when she's making the albums that have won her seven Grammy Awards. But the young singing sensation is an avid jogger and gets serious when she packs on the pounds, dieting down to country cutie shape. Normal weight for the 5-foot-11 superstar is 120 pounds. At a Fragrance Foundation Awards affair in New York on June 12, Taylor looked great, even though she's a bit on the thin side.

////// TAYLOR SWIFT

Jada (here dashing past the cameras in New York) says the strangest diet she was ever on had her eating tons of food and doing heavy-duty exercises "lifting 170 pounds chest weight and a lot of weight on my legs." The tiny 5-foot star of the "Matrix" movies is now a vegetarian and looks too thin at 105 pounds. Jada, 41, still works out strenuously and goes surfing with her two children and Hollywood heartthrob hubby Will Smith.

Observers thought that “E!” host Giuliana, 38, looked shockingly thin and nearly disappeared when she turned sideways at a recent network event. But the brave breast cancer survivor, who reportedly weighs 110 pounds, waves off critics. “I always eat healthy,” says 5-foot-9 Giuliana. “Just because I have to gain weight doesn’t mean I am going to go to a drive-through and pig out on fast food.”

////// MIRANDA LAMBERT

Miranda, 29, says she’s always been comfortable with her body, but the 5-foot-4 singer yo-yo’s between a 158-pound size 10 and a size 4. Although she jogs and lifts weights, she says she hates it. Giving in to junk food on road tours is one reason the Grammy winner packs on the pounds before she gets back to eating fish, chicken and other healthy foods. “I’m not a model. I’m not an actress,” she notes. “It’s OK to have a little bit of curve.” Miranda’s curves wowed the crowd at the recent CMT Music Awards.

Several years ago, 70-pound anorexic Hayley was given days to live. Somehow, Hayley finally saw the light and bounced back. The 25-year-old teacher trainee not only regained her beauty, she became a perfect picture of motherhood before giving birth to a son, Michael, something unthinkable during the dark days that destroyed her teen years. Low self-esteem set Hayley down the anorexic highway, and it was only the love and comfort of her family that brought her back. A healthy weight now, the mom from Manchester, England, says: “Michael will never want for anything. I will make sure that he has a healthy diet...and lots of love.”

Mama and the "Honey Boo Boo" clan hit the beach

Staying fat keeps the "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo" franchise going, so Honey Boo Boo's Mama June Shannon isn't going to shed any of her 263 pounds anytime soon. Reports say the 33-year-old reality star thinks the show's fans want her daughter and herself to be overweight. Sources say Mama June banned anything healthy from the menus at her Georgia home, and most meals are hefty servings of pizza, hot dogs, chili, pasta, sweet soft drinks and potato chips. "All super-fattening stuff," said an insider.

MAMA JUNE

Stress from her breakup with Tom Cruise has drained Katie, say sources. Her weight loss was evident when she wore a backless gown to a New York gala. Friends noted that the perkiness is gone from Katie's face, adding that she's dropped 12 pounds and, at 5-foot-9, looks stick-thin weighing 106. Katie, 34, raves about how she likes berries, but some pals wonder if that's all she's eating.

But she recently admitted she's packed on 105 pounds by indulging in Subway sandwiches (two at a time), greasy breakfasts that would feed three and bags full of fast-food burgers. THEN Fat Out of Hell! During his glory days in the '70s, his 300 pounds made rock legend Marvin Lee Aday, better known as Meat Loaf, distinct from the skinny rockers of the time. He turned vegetarian throughout most of the '80s and into the '90s, dropping more than 50 pounds. He looked trim and not at all Meat Loaf-like during his stint on "Celebrity Apprentice" in 2011. But it appears there's a lot more meat in Meat Loaf's life again. The 61-year-old singer seemed heavy and bloated in Dublin, Ireland, during his recent farewell tour.

Some say Miley, 20, is just trying to be more adult and believes working with a trainer on a diet and exercise program to stay super-skinny is cool. Others, however, are convinced that there are more serious reasons behind the pop star getting stick-thin and chopping off her hair. First, the "Hannah Montana" cutie is worried about her recent career flops. Then, say friends, she's been smoking pot and is upset over love problems with fiancé Liam Hemsworth and her parents' bitter divorce battle. Now, 5-foot-5 Miley is said to be 101 pounds, maybe less.

DANIELLE BRADBERRY – the youngest-ever winner of “The Voice” – has finally gotten the last laugh on the “mean girls” at her school.

Relentless teasing by bullies at her school in Cypress, Texas, drove the 16-year-old cutie to her bedroom, where she practiced her vocals day and night.

And it paid off big-time when Danielle, who was coached by Blake Shelton, won the coveted “Voice” crown and a recording contract on June 18.

“Danielle would run home after school, many times in tears, and shut the door behind her,” her 80-year-old grandmother Pat Bradberry said in an exclusive interview. “She sang her little heart out in that bedroom, sometimes for hours.”

DANIELLE ADMITTED ON THE HIT NBC show that she was picked on because she had crooked teeth.

“Her teeth were in really bad shape,” said Pat. “We would all tell her how lovely she was. I don’t know that she believed it.”

Despite the barbs about her teeth and taunts that she’d never get anywhere with her singing career, Danielle stayed focused on making her dream come true.

Fittingly, the aspiring country star wowed “The Voice” coaches and fans with her rendition of Taylor Swift’s “Mean,” a song about bullying.

“I don’t think any of us in the family ever realized what a good voice she had,” admitted Grandma Pat. “I’m just so proud of her.”

Danielle’s victory was also a win for NBC, as the show’s finale drew a whopping 15.3 million viewers. Afterward, the winner had a message for the bullies back home:

“Now I’m here, and they’re probably still in the same place, being mean.”

BIEBER’S AMERICAN DREAM SINKING

U.S. could BAN bad boy from becoming A CITIZEN

CANADIAN-BORN Justin Bieber is being urged by his management team to apply for U.S. citizenship, but the 19-year-old chart-topper’s advisers fear that his out-of-control antics may ruin his chances, say sources.

“Justin’s publicists are desperate to save his flagging image by aligning him with his biggest fan base, which is in the U.S.,” a pal of the Biebs told The ENQUIRER. “It would also be a way to say thank you to the fans who got him to where he is today.”

“But Justin’s recent track record isn’t great. His excuse of ‘I’m just a kid’ is starting to wear thin, and if he wants to get his citizenship he has to prove he’s of good moral character.”

The “Baby” singer’s troubles with the law date back to October 2011 when cops gave him a warning after he cut off a police cruiser while driving. Since then, he’s made headlines for alleged pot-smoking and throwing a shoe at a photographer, and the Swedish police found drugs and a stun gun on his tour bus in Stockholm.

Justin’s also been accused of threatening a neighbor and spitting in his face after the father of three yelled at him to slow down while driving extremely fast through their Calabasas, Calif., neighborhood.

MOST RECENTLY, COPS CLEARED THE “BOYFRIEND” SINGER AFTER HE nearly crushed a photographer with his Ferrari.

“It’s a PR nightmare for his team,” the source noted. “They want Justin to rehab his flagging image by aligning himself with his biggest fans in America. He’s meeting with immigration lawyers, but it will be a waste of time if he doesn’t clean up his act.”

Mark Carmel, a Florida-based immigration attorney who specializes in visas for actors and musicians, warns that Justin’s citizenship bid could fall flat.

“An applicant has to show good moral character for the previous five years,” he said. “But Justin seems to be continually in trouble with the law.”

Vietnam vet walks free

AFTER SLAYING LOVE RIVAL

Ralph Wald and his wife Johnna address the media after his release

— THEN TAKES CHEATING WIFE TO WAFFLE HOUSE TO CELEBRATE

“I didn’t think I did anything wrong”

AFTER Vietnam veteran Lt. Col. Ralph Wald was acquitted of killing his wife’s lover, he celebrated by taking her to her favorite restaurant, Waffle House.

“I am elated, absolutely elated,” said Wald’s wife Johnna, 41. “Because my husband puts me first, he’s taking me for my favorite meal, the patty-melt platter.

“I love him!”

It was an incredible end to a bizarre tale of sex, booze, erectile dysfunction and a man shot to death with his pants around his knees.

WALD, 70, WAS CHARGED WITH SECOND-DEGREE murder after he awoke in their home near Tampa, Fla., to find Johnna having sex with her old flame Walter Conley, 32, on the living room floor.

“I went to get a glass of water around midnight and saw a strange man having sex with my wife,” said Wald. “I took my gun from the bedroom and shot him three times, including the head.”

“If the same thing happened again, I would do the same thing. I didn’t think I did anything wrong.”

Wald claimed he shot Conley in self-defense because he believed his wife was being raped.

“I got a gun and I shot him,” he admitted. “And I’m not trying to hide that from anybody. I said it to the 911, I said it to the two police detectives, I said it in court. I’ve been telling the truth.”

Wald, a highly decorated combat veteran who was awarded the Silver Star – one of the highest decorations for military valor – married Johnna Flores, his next-door neighbor, on Oct. 31.

Johnna, his fifth wife, had been involved with Conley, a laborer who had a record of petty theft, on and off for years. She said that on March 10, the night of the shooting, she was drunk on cognac and had probably passed out because her memory was hazy.

Wald, who suffers from erectile dysfunction, said: “I was in the infantry for over 20 years. Part of my job was to go out and keep my people alive and people from being alive, and I did my job well.

“What happened here that night, I very much relate to close combat. The same sort of thing I’ve seen in the tunnels

The couple have proclaimed their love for each other and are moving on in Vietnam. I didn’t know if he had a weapon or weapons with him. All I knew was somebody was fornicating with my wife.”

After two days of testimony in May, jurors took just two hours to proclaim Wald not guilty.

“Now I’m concentrating on putting our marriage back together,” he said. “My wife is undergoing counseling for bipolar disorder and alcohol problems. Then we are both going to family counseling.

“I love my wife and she loves me. We’re determined to put this nightmare behind us and move on with our lives.”

A MISSING prenup and a family feud nearly derailed “Real Housewives of Atlanta” diva NeNe Leakes’ second-time-around wedding!

NeNe, 45, and ex-hubby Gregg Leakes, 58, argued until minutes before the lavish June 22 ceremony that’s set to air on her upcoming Bravo spinoff, “I Dream of NeNe: The Wedding,” sources say.

“When NeNe agreed to marry Gregg, she insisted that he sign a prenup, and he agreed,” a family friend revealed.

“But Gregg kept putting it off because he hoped NeNe would get so caught up in planning their over-the-top ceremony that she’d either forget about the prenup or just let it go.”

WHEN THE COUPLE FIRST WED in 1997, NeNe was a stripper and Gregg was the family breadwinner. They divorced in 2011 but remained friendly. Gregg proposed last New Year’s Eve, and NeNe – who’s now worth about $4.5 million, while Gregg has faced financial problems – accepted.

Wedding guests had already gathered when NeNe exploded at Gregg over the unsigned prenup, said the source.

“Gregg vowed to NeNe that he’d never take her money,” said the source. “But NeNe yelled back that if Gregg thought she wouldn’t call the whole thing off and take her butt home, then he didn’t know her at all!”

“They went back and forth for about 45 minutes, until Gregg signed the papers. But their guests never had a clue the ceremony had come so close to being called off.”

NeNe also refused to send a wedding invitation to her sister Kenya Sherman after a feud between the two exploded on the series’ reunion show earlier this year.

“Producers were considering bringing Kenya and NeNe’s other sister on the show to clear up the feud,” said the source.

“But NeNe said she’d walk if they did, so producers immediately nixed the idea.”

MARIE OSMOND is all a-Twitter over The ENQUIRER's report that she'll be a first-time grandma!

The same day our story hit newsstands, Marie trilled the happy news on Twitter.

"It's true!!!!" the beloved 53-year-old entertainer wrote.

"My son Steve and his beautiful wife Claire are expecting. I'm going to be a Grandma!!!!"

As we reported in our scoop, Marie's eldest son, Steve Craig, finally made good on his promise to give his superstar mom her first grandchild.

SOURCES CLOSE TO MARIE TOLD The ENQUIRER that Steve's wife Claire is three months pregnant – and the parents-to-be are praying for a boy.

That's because, as we reported in 2011, the couple hope to name their son Michael as a tribute to Steve's adopted brother, who tragically committed suicide at age 18.

Michael was suffering from depression when he jumped from the eighth-floor balcony of his Los Angeles apartment building in February 2010.

"Marie was devastated by Michael's death," said the source. "That's why becoming a grandma means so much to her. It's bringing a measure of joy back into her life."

"She said, 'I can't wait! You won't be able to get me away from that child.'"

S EAN PENN's ex-wife Robin Wright is trying to hitch a ride on the Hollywood baby bandwagon!

Already a mom to two grown kids, the 47-year-old actress wants to follow in the footsteps of older moms Kelly Preston and Halle Berry and have a child with her much-younger lover, 32-year-old "X-Men" star Ben Foster, reveals an insider.

"ROBIN AND BEN ARE very much in love and have been talking marriage and babies since February," said a close family friend.

"She wants to be a mom again and, even though at her age the odds are stacked against her, she is hoping for it to happen naturally. She figures if it worked for Halle Berry at 46, she doesn't see why it couldn't work for her too."

But if nature fails to co-operate, the couple will consider adoption or surrogacy. Insiders say Robin was moved by videos of orphans in Haiti sent to her by her ex-hubby Sean, who runs an aid project for the earthquake-ravaged island.

Robin, most famous for her roles in "The Princess Bride" and "Forrest Gump," met Ben – who dated actress Ellen Page and rocker Lenny Kravitz's daughter Zoe – on the set of the crime drama "Rampart" in 2011. That was just months after her divorce from Sean became final. She already has two children from that marriage – daughter Dylan, 22, and son Hopper, 19.

AND NOW, SAYS THE friend, she's ready for more.

"Robin's swept off her feet by Ben and she wants to spend the rest of her life with him," the friend added.

"Some of her friends think she's crazy because she'll be raising a teenager in her 60s, but starting a family together is a dream for both of them."

Robin already has two grown kids with Sean, shown here during a family outing at a basketball game in 2004. Hopper (in hat) is now 19, and Dylan is 22

RESTLESS LEGS WARNING

★ Men with restless legs syndrome – an irresistible urge to move legs, especially at night – appear to be at risk for an earlier death.

In an eight-year study of more than 18,000 men, Harvard Medical School researchers found that those with restless legs syndrome had a nearly 40 percent increased risk of early death than men without the condition.

“Through research, we need to pinpoint why and how RLS leads to this possible higher risk of dying early,” says study author Dr. Xiang Gao.

★ Moms can boost their babies’ brain power by breast-feeding exclusively for at least the first three months of life.

Brown University researchers studied brain growth in children up to age 4 and found that breast-feeding alone produced better brain development than formula alone or a combination of both.

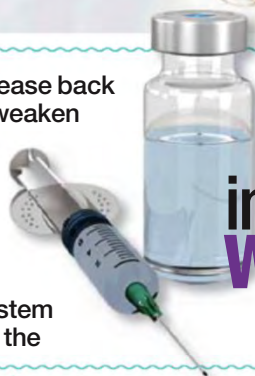

“We’re finding the difference (in white matter growth) is on the order of 20 to 30 percent, comparing the breast-fed and the nonbreast-fed kids,” says lead researcher Sean Deoni. “It’s astounding that you could have that much difference so early.”

Breast-feeding NURTURES YOUNG MINDS

★ Steroid injections to ease back pain or sciatica can weaken the spinal column and lead to fractures.

After analyzing the records of thousands of people with spinal problems, researchers at the Henry Ford Health System in Michigan found that as the number of steroid injections increased, the likelihood of getting a fracture also increased.

Spinal injections WEAKEN BONES

The conclusion: People at risk for osteoporosis-related fractures should discuss their treatment plan with their doctor.

How bright is your SMARTPHONE?

★ Getting a better night’s sleep could be as easy as adjusting your smartphone or tablet.

Scientists found that when brightness settings were lowered and the devices were held at least 14 inches from a user’s face, it reduced the risk that the light would be bright enough to keep them from falling asleep.

Dr. Lois Krahn, a sleep expert at Mayo Clinic in Scottsdale, Ariz., notes that the light at the medium or low setting is still bright enough to use.

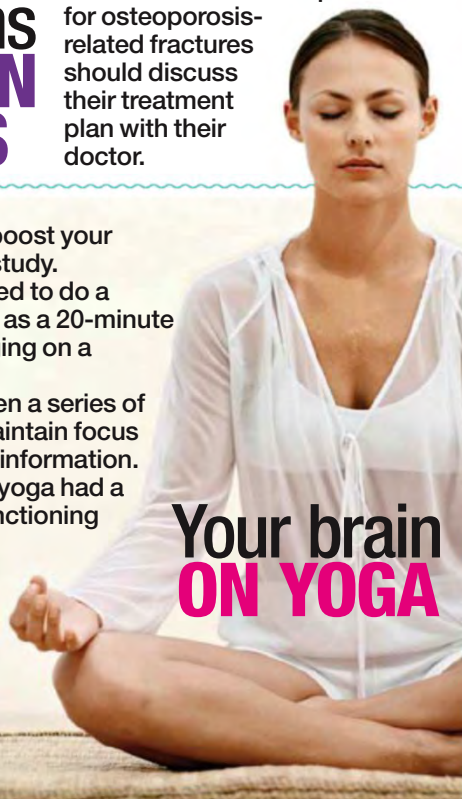

★ Just 20 minutes of yoga can boost your brainpower, suggests a new study.

A group of women were instructed to do a 20-minute session of yoga as well as a 20-minute aerobic session of walking or jogging on a treadmill.

After each activity they were given a series of tests to measure their ability to maintain focus and to take in, retain and use new information. Comparative results showed that yoga had a more powerful impact on brain functioning than aerobic activity.

“The breathing and meditative exercises aim at calming the mind and body and keeping distracting thoughts away while you focus on your body, posture or breath,” says researcher Neha Gothe. Those abilities come in handy during day-to-day activities.

CRYPTOGRAM QUOTES

FAMOUS QUOTES FROM YOUR FAVORITE PEOPLE

Cryptograms are coded messages. To solve the Cryptogram, each coded letter must be replaced by the answer letter in the box overhead. When you solve the code for a letter, write the answer letter in the box everywhere the coded letter appears. Look for common words and letter patterns to break the code. Words like AND, I, THE and A are found frequently. Common word endings are ING, S and E.

LEN FELDMAN'S BEST BETS ON TV

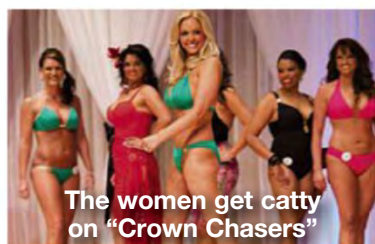

What's hot
this week

Betty White's Off Their Rocker (Season Finale)

Tuesday, July 9, 8:30 p.m. ET, NBC

Betty White and her posse of prankster seniors pull out all the stops tonight with a special guest star – seven-time Emmy winner and White's former "Mary Tyler Moore" co-star Ed Asner. With the hidden cameras rolling, these veteran character actors run rampant, shocking regular folks on the street with some of the series' best gags yet. Asner and White are a joy to watch as a randy online dating couple. Also on the show, an elderly woman tries to take a nude photo of herself for her bucket list, and a man's dentures fall into a stranger's cup of coffee in the outrageously funny Season 2 finale.

The women get catty on "Crown Chasers"

Crown Chasers (Special)

Wednesday, July 10, 10 p.m. ET, TLC

Imagine the little beauty queens on "Toddlers & Tiaras" as mothers and grandmothers still competing in beauty pageants to feel pretty and you have "Crown Chasers." The kids on "Toddlers" don't have anything on these real housewives when it comes to throwing tantrums and creating drama inside the world of the "Mrs." pageant circuit in Denver, Colo. From Botox to body wraps and even plastic surgery, there is nothing these women won't do to stay beautiful and be the center of attention. With their competitive cattiness and downright childish behavior, these ladies prove that getting older doesn't always mean growing up.

The Bridge (New Show!)

Wednesday, July 10, 10 p.m. ET, FX

When an anti-immigration-minded American judge is apparently found sliced in two on the bridge connecting El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico, El Paso homicide Det. Sonya Cross (Diane Kruger) is called upon to investigate. But she soon discovers that the two halves are from two different bodies – one American and one Mexican. That means half of the case is hers and the other half belongs to her Chihuahua State Police counterpart Marco Ruiz (Demian Bichir). Sonya and Marco must work together to find a serial killer who's working both sides of the border. Surprising, shocking and gripingly tense, "The Bridge" is one well-constructed crime thriller.

Bichir & Kruger

Summer Camp (New Show!)

Thursday, July 11, 8 p.m. ET, USA Network

It's like "Survivor" goes to summer camp as 16 strangers, ranging from an ugly duckling-turned-fashion model to a Miami firefighter who grew up pranking girls, bunk down and compete in a summer-long Battle of the Sexes for a cash prize of $250,000. Tonight, the ladies' and men's camps compete in a full-scale canoeing Color War on the lake. The losing team must banish two of their members to the other camp, where the winners decide who goes and who stays in this wild new relationship/competition series. Former "American Idol" finalist Matt Rogers hosts.

THREE-months-pregnant Jennifer Love Hewitt is threatening to quit her risqué TV show "The Client List" if execs don't heed her demands!

The 34-year-old actress, who also serves as the show's executive producer, is insisting that her co-star and real-life baby daddy, fiancé Brian Hallisay, have a child with her on the hit Lifetime drama next season.

Jennifer's character pregnant again next season – or else she won't be coming back."

But top execs want Egglesfield's character to father the baby, a plot twist they feel will bolster the show's slipping ratings.

"The producers have been developing the relationship between Riley and Evan," said the source. "Viewers love them as a couple, and it would be a blockbuster to see her get pregnant on the show with his child."

But the execs now find themselves between a rock and a hard place. "The ratings have been down and the series hasn't been renewed for Season 3 yet," said the source. "Jennifer's plan could be a show killer. But if she doesn't get her way, she could walk away from the series altogether. It's a real mess!"

Jennifer's really throwing her weight around" revolves around financially strapped single mom Riley Parks – played by Jennifer – who takes a job in a massage parlor, offering "special services" to help make ends meet. Hallisay plays her jailbird husband Kyle, and actor Colin Egglesfield is her brother-in-law, a cop named Evan who's in love with her.

THE SHOW

"Jennifer's really throwing her weight around," said a show insider.

Lighten up, Tammy

Tammy Jung, you looked great at 112 pounds. You could have been a healthy model. How long do you expect to live if you continue to feed your 420-pound body junk food (Fat Lady's Dying To Be Bigger!, June 3)? You'll be bedridden, single, childless and unhappy. Sound like fun?

– Louise C., Norristown, Pa.

It's not working

I don't understand how so many once-beautiful women are convinced they'll be more charming by using Botox and having face-lifts and nips and tucks (Plastic Surgery Shockers, June 3). Most of them transform into comical strangers and call attention to their waning years.

HOW TO PLAY

You must fill in every empty square in the Sudoku grid. There's no right way of going about this, but there is only ever one solution. The big grid is split into nine mini-grids. There are nine rows running left to right and nine columns running down. In every row, you must have each of the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9. These can be in any order. The same applies to columns and mini-grids: place every number 1 through 9 in each column and in each mini-grid.

Valerie Harper's FINAL RESTING PLACE

Cancer-stricken star planning her own funeral

Valerie will be buried in a mausoleum that looks like a four-poster black lacquer bed

June 18, 2013

The actress is losing her hair due to steroid and chemo treatments

BRAVE, cancer-ravaged Valerie Harper has undertaken the heartbreaking task of planning her own funeral – and The ENQUIRER has the exclusive photos of the tragic actress' final resting place.

Although the former "Rhoda" star had initially wanted to be cremated, her husband of 26 years, Tony Cacciotti, was dead-set against it. So the two recently visited the Hollywood Forever Cemetery in Los Angeles, where they selected a beautiful plot in the Garden of Legends.

"They stayed for a very long time to pick out the perfect place," said a senior family adviser at the cemetery. "Valerie was beautiful, upbeat and had a very bright spirit, despite her battle with cancer."

"She seemed very much at peace with herself. Once they found (the right spot), Valerie exclaimed, 'This is it!'"

Valerie, 73, will be buried in a mausoleum that looks like a four-poster black lacquer bed with enough room to place Tony beside her. The couple picked the spot near a lake, "which has a perfect view of the Hollywood sign," noted the family counselor.

The couple picked a plot in the Garden of Legends

Another cemetery worker revealed that Valerie's final resting place will be near the grave of rocker Johnny Ramone of The Ramones and a memorial to Academy Award winner Hattie McDaniel, who played Mammy in "Gone with the Wind."

Valerie, who was diagnosed with a rare terminal brain cancer in January, is already living on borrowed time – her doctors originally gave her just three to six months to live.

DESPITE GAINING SOME WEIGHT and losing hair due to steroid and chemotherapy treatments, the actress continues to work. She filmed an episode of Betty White's TV Land show, "Hot in Cleveland," with her "Mary Tyler Moore Show" cast mates Moore, White, Cloris Leachman and Georgia Engel that will air Sept. 4. She's also shooting a one-hour NBC special documentary, hosted by Meredith Vieira, chronicling her battle with the incurable disease.

Noted the pal: "Valerie wants to stay busy until the bitter end."

TINY HORSE IS TORNADO MIRACLE

A TERRIFIED miniature horse was saved by a little girl with a heart big enough to overcome the horror of one of the worst tornadoes in history. With her tender loving care, 10-year-old Addison “Addy” Trimmel snapped the traumatized horse, Buddy, out of his deep depression and gave him a new lease on life.

“It’s a miracle that Buddy survived the tornado, but the biggest miracle of all is that he met Addy,” her father, Kevin Trimmel, told The ENQUIRER.

When a massive twister struck Moore, Okla., on May 19, up to 250 horses, mules and donkeys perished. Hundreds more were injured and left with no homes.

Veterinarians tended to the animals with physical wounds, and local facilities pitched in to provide barn space for displaced animals.

But there was no animal psychologist for 7-year-old Buddy, who’d been left outdoors while his owners sought shelter from the storm.

Buddy’s debris-littered pasture was like a minefield after the storm and no good for grazing. So he was taken to Heritage Place, a high-end auction farm for race horses, for emergency housing.

While he had no serious physical injuries, Buddy clearly had psychological wounds. He stayed in the corner of his stall, nose against the wall, refusing food and water, his life threatened by the deep shock he’d suffered from the storm.

“We were really concerned about Buddy,” said Trimmel, facilities manager of Heritage Place. “He was completely depressed. He wouldn’t leave his stall, and we couldn’t get him to eat or drink.

“Dehydration can kill a horse pretty quickly, and we were force-feeding him water from a bottle. But it wasn’t enough. Buddy was headed for death.”

Then, angelic Addy stepped into Buddy’s life. “Addy’s been around horses since she was 2, and she fell in love with Buddy from the start,” Trimmel said.

“She talked to him, brushed him and stroked his head. Then she braided his mane, tail and forelocks. Buddy took to her right away, and after about two hours, Addy was able to slip a halter on him. She led him outside, walked him around and started playing with him.

“GRADUALLY, BUDDY BEGAN TO GRAZE.

When she took him back to the barn, Buddy started drinking water, and he’s been doing great ever since! Just having Addy’s hands-on care was all the medicine he needed to snap back to life.”

Sadly, Buddy and his angel Addy will be separated when his rightful owners come to claim him.

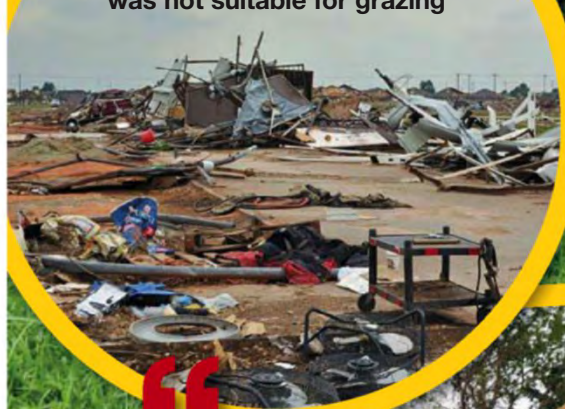

“I think they both know their time together is limited, but Addy will be able to visit Buddy long after he’s returned,” said Trimmel. “She’s in love with that horse and he really loves her. Addy saved his life – there’s no doubt about that.”
